Off Newport, R. The newspapers all over the country are printing Senator Foraker's picture. That's about all he'll get in connection with his fight against Taft for the Presidential nomination.

None of our exchanges have recently mentioned the price of radium. Wonder if it has "come down" within reach of editors during these prosperous times.

President Roosevelt, it is said, declares that he has not "had a dream since childhood." Oh, well, he's had something next door to it in imagining that he has done any big shakes in busting the trusts.

An Ohio Republican paper says: "It will take a statesman with a long reach to get the nomination for President in 1908." Well, President Roosevelt is already trying to convince Republicans that Secretary Taft has the reach of a giraffe.

News comes from Lorain, O., that the municipal authorities are going to put women on the police force. Bet every married man in Lorain is afraid his wife will get on the force, so she can arrest him on suspicion if he is caught down town late at night.

LUMBERTON'S DAY IN THE FEDERAL COURT

Unveiling of Handsome Cor-rate Monument in Grand Robeson Yesterday.

GOV. GLENN THE ORATOR

Seven Thousand People Attended—
Exercises Appropriate and Befitting
Great Occasion—Gen. Metts
With Veterans.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Lumberton, N. C., May 10.—Today was the greatest day in the history of our town. The unveiling of the Confederate monument recently erected on the Court House square attracted thousands of people from many miles around. The streets and public buildings were elaborately decorated in National colors, banners bearing in large letters the word "welcome" were hung across the street and caught the eye of every visitor. People began arriving last night, and by 10 o'clock this morning it was with difficulty that the crowds passed on the streets.

At 10 o'clock Governor Glenn arrived on a special train from Hamlet and was met at the depot by Col. and Mrs. N. A. McLean, and escorted to their elegant home in North Lumberton. The parade started from the Waverly Hotel at 11 o'clock, the marshals, one hundred in number, made a splendid appearance on their prancing horses, and their bright sashes flying in the breeze. Following came the speaker of the day, Governor Glenn, in a carriage with Col. N. A. McLean and Stephen McIntyre, Esq. Next came the military companies of Lumberton and Maxton, and after them followed nearly six hundred veterans, headed by Gen. J. I. Metts, of Wilmington, each wearing his badge and walking with firm, proud step to the music of the bands furnished by the cadets of the North Carolina Military Academy, of Red Springs, who marched in the rear; then the floats, beautiful evidence of the work and love of the good women of the county. Maxton led in this feature, and in the float was Miss Bonnie McBryde, who was given the honor of unveiling the monument, with a large number of young ladies attractively dressed. This was followed in succession by the floats of Red Springs, Fairmont and Lumberton, three floats. All these were beautifully arranged and elicited many expressions of admiration.

The parade stopped at the Court House, where Governor Glenn was escorted to the stand in the Court House yard. Prayer was offered by Rev. H. G. Hill, after which "The Old North State" was sung by the chorus of young ladies in the floats.

At 12 o'clock the monument was unveiled by Miss McBryde under the auspices of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. This part of the programme was watched with closest attention. A military salute followed. "The Conquered Banner" was beautifully recited by Miss Katie Lee McKinnon, of Maxton.

Governor Glenn addressed the people in his usual attractive manner, and made a most eloquent address. Crosses of Honor were conferred on the veterans by the Daughters. The delivery of custody and care of the monument to the Board of County Commissioners of Robeson county was by Gen. S. J. Cobb, of Lumberton, and it was most fittingly done. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. C. H. Durham. At 4:30 o'clock the Daughters decorated the graves of the Confederate soldiers. The weather was all that could be desired. The crowd was estimated at about 7,000 people, with not a single unpleasant incident. It was indeed Lumberton's greatest day, and one by which local history for many years to come will be reckoned.

INSPECTED DEPARTMENT.

New Fire Committee on Its Round
Yesterday Afternoon.

The newly appointed fire committee of the Board of Aldermen yesterday in company with Chief Schnibben made a round of all the fire station to inspect the work and express themselves as highly pleased with the conditions as they found them. Mr. W. A. French, Jr., and Messrs. Rathjen and Bolles are the members of the committee. Of course, Mr. Rathjen doesn't need anybody to show him around the Wilmington Fire Department, but he was along just the same and has lost none of his old-time interest in the boys. The inspection also included a trip about the harbor on the fire boat Atlantic.

On the Golf Links.

There will be a ladies' handicap match on the links of the Cape Fear Golf Club this afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, the prize being one of the handsome Tiffany loving cups recently presented to the club by Mr. Douglas Nash, of New York. The match for men for another of the handsome cups was played yesterday afternoon and the trophy was won by Mr. Geo. Rountree, who made the rounds of nine holes each with 46. The cups offered by the same generous donor for the tennis tournament will be played for later.

Only Few Cases of Interest on the Library of Congress Met Heard Yesterday
Suit to Be Heard
This Morning.

Aside from the Nelson case which is spoken of elsewhere in today's paper, there was very little doing in the Federal Court yesterday, only a few trifling cases being disposed of. The civil suit of Wiley Harker Camp Company against C. H. Smith on the Circuit Court docket was dismissed during the day, a compromise in the same having been effected. One of the cases on the District Court docket yesterday was that of P. H. Voss, alias P. H. Morse, the traveling man for a liquor house who recently came through the city and sold quite extensively to Wilmington saloon keepers upon warehouse receipts. The defendant was called and failed yesterday and the cash bond deposited through Mr. Morris Bretzfelder will be forfeited. Judgment was entered nisi sci fa and capias.

This morning the seventeen cases instituted by the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Atlantic Coast Line charging a violation of the safety appliance act of Congress will be called and argued on demurrer by the railroad attorneys. Special counsel from the Interstate Commerce Commission is here to represent the government with District Attorney Skinner and Assistant District Attorney J. A. Giles.

Cases disposed of during the day were as follows:

Mary Jane Tiker, Robeson county, retailing; verdict guilty, 60 days in jail, $100 fine and costs.
Cagle Locklear, Robeson, retailing; 4 months in jail, $100 fine and costs.
Edward A. Nelson, robbery of mail, pleaded guilty, 18 months at hard labor in Atlanta prison under section 5476.

Peter Davis, Robeson, retailing; 60 days in jail, $100 fine and costs.

Neill Doares, Robeson, retailing, 4 months in jail, $100 fine and costs.

Mary Jane Oxendine, Robeson, retailing; called and failed; judgment nisi sci fa and capias.

P. H. Voss, alias P. H. Morse, New Hanover, called and failed; judgment nisi sci fa and capias.

Mary Bell Oxendine, Robeson, retailing; on trial when court took a recess at 2 P. M. until 9:30 A. M. today.

WANT HIM TO REMAIN.

Chamber of Commerce Will Endeavor to Retain Mr. Merritt.

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday morning at the request of the Committee on Harbor and Shipping. The meeting was for the purpose of protesting against the contemplated transfer of Mr. R. C. Merritt from the United States Engineer's office in this city. The meeting was well attended by the most representative people of Wilmington and a very strong resolution was unanimously adopted upon motion of Mr. H. W. Malloy, setting forth that Mr. Merritt has grown up with the work here, having been employed on the same for 22 years, and has a perfect working knowledge of the dam injured by the late storm which it is hoped to have repaired by intelligent construction work, a degree of efficiency in which cannot be attained by a man not acquainted with all the conditions. The resolution also protests against the removal of Mr. Merritt at this particular time and asks that if any other appointment has been made, that it be reconsidered and Mr. Merritt retained on the work of the lower Cape Fear river from Wilmington to sea.

Major Jos. E. Kuhn, in charge of this district of the Corps of Engineers, was in the city yesterday and the committee from the Chamber of Commerce at once made a personal call on him to present a copy of the resolutions to him and to urge the retention of Mr. Merritt here. Aside from his abilities as an engineer Wilmington would reluctantly give Mr. Merritt up as a citizen. It is to be hoped the Chamber of Commerce will be successful in its efforts to have him retained here.

U. C. T. BEING ORGANIZED.

Council of Favorite Traveling Men's Fraternity in Wilmington.

Mr. Louis N. Schiff, of Charlotte, Grand Secretary of the United Commercial Travelers of America, in the Carolinas, has been in Wilmington the past several days, and has succeeded in interesting 35 or 40 Wilmington knights of the grip in his fraternity, a council of which will be organized at The Orton this afternoon. This will make five councils of the order in this State, and the work is still going on. The Wilmington council will probably be called "The Cape Fear," and it will start off with a charter list of among the leading traveling salesmen out of Wilmington. The charter list will be kept open a few days longer, in an effort to interest still a greater number of the traveling men in the institution, which is both social and fraternal.

Mr. Thomas A. Darby Married.

Friends in this city will be interested in the announcement of the marriage of Mr. Thomas A. Darby and Miss Mattie Sheridan, which was solemnized on Thursday, May 2nd, by Rev. Father Devine, at Weehawken. The announcement is in a copy of the New York Press of March 3d, copies of which have been received by friends in this city.

NELSON IS SENTENCED

Young Wilmington Railway Mail
Clerk Gets Eighteen Months in Federal Prison.

FOR LARCENY OF MONEY

Affecting Scene in United States District Court Yesterday—Prisoner Will Be Taken Away Early
the Coming Week.

Eighteen months at hard labor in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., was the judgment pronounced yesterday morning by Judge Purnell in the United States District Court upon Edward A. Nelson, the young railway mail clerk of this city, who submitted to the charge of having robbed a registered pouch containing $10,000 in currency consigned by the Atlantic National Bank, of Wilmington, to its correspondent, the Chemical National Bank, of New York, in this city last March. In view of his previous high character, his full and free confession and his restoration of the money, Judge Purnell intimated that he would like to let the young defendant off with a fine, but the law would not permit of this leniency in a case of so grave a nature, and the penalty as stated was imposed. Soon after court took a recess at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, his bond having been discharged upon his appearance in court, Nelson was taken to the county jail by a deputy marshal and will be held there until the present term of court is completed and the marshal can find time to take the prisoner to begin his sentence. Bond for a prisoner's liberty cannot be given after final judgment is passed upon him without there is an appeal.

There was a large crowd in the small court room when the case was called, among those in the audience being Rev. N. M. Watson, pastor of Grace M. E. Church which the young defendant attended; Rev. W. A. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, and others. The mother and young wife of the prisoner were seated in a room near the main hall. Nelson sat very close to his counsel, Mr. Marsden Bellamy, and seemed resigned to his fate, though many said that he was totally unprepared for a sentence of imprisonment. The young man seemed rather to cling to his counsel and after the trial when Mr. Bellamy, in the most eloquent language, was making a plea of mercy to the court, he wept. This was especially noticeable when Mr. Bellamy said that when the young man was taken away he would leave "a train of deep sorrow behind."

The government opened its case with the introduction of Col. S. T. Hooton, chief of inspectors at Baltimore, Md., who told about the same story of the robbery and subsequent capture of the young man as was officially given out by him just after the arrest. His story of the visit to New York with Inspector W. J. Maxwell, of Wilmington, Del., was especially interesting. They were advised while in Washington by Postmaster Wallace that Nelson had gone to New York and was stopping at the Imperial Hotel. They immediately proceeded there and took a room just across the hall from that occupied by Nelson so that they could watch his coming and going. One morning as Nelson stepped out of his room they asked him to come across the hall and there he was put through a "sweating process." Nelson drew a package containing $1,170 from his overcoat pocket but said that represented his savings from his salary for the year before; that he had saved nothing from his salary for the past year. The bank notes were carefully examined and sealing wax was found between two of them, indicating that they had been put up by an institution accustomed to handling money in large quantities. It was also found that some of the notes were of date 1906 when Nelson said they had been saved before that time. Col. Hooton then detailed the transaction on the Wilmington end of the investigation, the confession and the story of the recovery of the money.

Inspector S. H. Buck, of this district, was next introduced, and told of securing a statement from Nelson different from the one he had given the other inspectors in New York. He also secured an admission from Nelson that he had found $800 in an envelope in the mail clerk's room in this city. He was then asked to explain, knowing that the money had been stolen, why he had not informed the officials. It was this straw that broke the camel's back, so to speak, and the full and free confession quickly followed. Then the inspectors detailed Nelson's confession of how the theft was actually committed while Mr. Frank Powers, to whom he had transferred here, was sent to the mail box under the shed to get the drop letters, the pouch having been cut and the contents having been thrown in a coal bin on account of its bulk. Inspector Hooton stated that in view of the fact that the package had lain in the car for two days, if the robbery had been discovered earlier, Clerk Powers would undoubtedly have been arrested. As it was he was under surveillance for some days and had taken the part of Nelson, stoutly

BOY FRACTURED SKULL

Sad Death of Young James H. Quin-linvan, Little Son of Mrs. Annie Quinlinvan, on Second Street—
Fell Wednesday.

There is an element of tragedy in the death of young James H. Quinlinvan, twelve years old, and a son of Mrs. Annie Quinlinvan, which occurred last night at 10 o'clock at the family home in this city, No. 215 North Second street. Master Quinlinvan Wednesday afternoon was playing hide and seek with a number of his companions in the vicinity of Second and Chesnut streets and on the hard granolithic sidewalk nearly in front of Mr. B. G. Worth's residence, across from his home, he fell heavily while running, fracturing the base of the skull. He was apparently not fatally injured at the time, though Drs. Burbank and Caldwell were hastily summoned, and he lingered until last night when he had a turn for the worse, death coming finally to end his sufferings. He was a bright lad, and was well thought of by all his companions. He was attending the Catholic school in this city when the accident occurred, and especially with his school mates will the news of his death come with great sorrow.

The lad was a son of the late Daniel Quinlinvan, so well and so favorably remembered in Wilmington, and was 12 years and eight months of age at the time of his death. He is survived by his heart-broken mother and a number of sisters and brothers, who have the tenderest sympathy of many friends in the great bereavement they have suffered. None of the companions of the young boy were responsible for the accident which caused the death, but they are greatly distressed over the tragedy. The boy suffered great pain during the days he lived, and was conscious for only a part of the time.

The funeral will be conducted at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from St. Thomas' Catholic Church by Rev. Father C. Dennen, and the interment will be beside the grave of his late father in beautiful Oakdale Cemetery.

Soldier Buried Here.

The remains of the late Private Hamilton, who was killed at Fort Caswell while on a rampage with a gun there Wednesday, inflicting fatal wounds upon his wife and seriously injuring Corporal Watson, were brought up to the city yesterday morning and interred in the National cemetery. A number of his comrades accompanied the remains of the soldier. The remains of Mrs. Hamilton will be brought up to the city for interment also in the National cemetery today.

CONFEDERATE DEAD

Loving Tribute Paid in Beautiful
Exercises Held Yesterday in Oakdale.

ADDRESS BY REV. J. A. SMITH

Large Audience Delighted With His Able Discourse—Other Features of the Observance Fitting and Appropriate—The Military.

Loving tribute was paid to the memory of the Confederate dead who are at rest in Oakdale Cemetery in the beautiful and appropriate observance of Memorial Day under the auspices of Cape Fear Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, yesterday afternoon. The exercises were largely attended by the people of Wilmington, and all joined reverently in the spirit of the occasion. The address by Rev. J. A. Smith, himself a gallant Confederate and speaker of no mean ability, was highly befitting the occasion, eloquent and pleasing. He was heard with the greatest interest, and his remarks were frequently interrupted by applause. Mr. Junius Davis, of the Wilmington bar, was master of ceremonies, and made a most excellent presiding officer. Rev. Thos. P. Noe, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, served most acceptably as chaplain, opening the exercises with an invocation, appropriate to the occasion, and concluding the services with a benediction.

Promptly at the appointed hour the procession of the veterans, Sons of Veterans, Daughters of the Confederacy, Children's Chapter, U. D. C. and the four local military commands formed a long procession at the beautiful lodge in Oakdale Cemetery, and under direction of Mr. Davis, chief marshal, and his aides, it moved in perfect order to the Confederate lot, where the military opened ranks allowing the Daughters and the Veterans to pass within the enclosure first, being seated near the improvised stand erected for the purpose of the exercises. The four military companies were as follows, all with full ranks: The Wilmington Light Infantry, in command of Capt. Wm. F. Robertson, the Wilmington Division, Naval Reserve, Lieut. John B. Peschman; the Boys' Brigade, Capt. J. J. Loughlin, and the Junior Division, Boys' Brigade, Capt. A. L. Burris. The various features of the programme as previously published, were carried out exactly in order, a quartette composed of Messrs. W. L. Willford, Green Fenley, W. G. W. Kraft, and A. S. Holden, having rendered with splendid effect a number of vocal selections appropriate to the day. The monument was prettily decorated with flowers and native moss, while the stand from which the programme was carried out was similarly beautified. Following the invocation by Rev. Mr. Noe, the orator of the day, Rev. Mr. Smith, was presented in highly complimentary terms by Mr. Davis, the chief marshal, and his excellent address followed as published in full below. Mr. Smith was given a most attentive hearing, and his delivery was excellent.

Following the address the reading of the roll of honored dead, was observed according to the beautiful custom and then followed the presentation of Crosses of Honor to the veterans according to the list published in yesterday's papers. The veterans came forward as their names were called and the emblems were pinned on the lapels of their coats by the ladies of the Daughters of the Confederacy. This with a selection by the quartette, concluded the exercises, and after the benediction, impressively spoken by Rev. Mr. Noe, each of the military companies in turn fired a salute over the monument. Then taps were blown and the large crowd in attendance took their departure. Before returning to the city the Boys' Brigade repaired to the grave of their lamented friend and supporter, the late Capt. William Rand Kenan, and to the final resting place of their former comrade, R. P. Presson, and fired a salute in honor of each.

Address of Mr. Smith.

Rev. Mr. Smith was greeted with the warmest applause when he arose in response to the happy presentation by Mr. Davis. He spoke as follows: The month of May has become historic and famous in the Southland. One of the beautiful customs of our people is to meet once a year to scatter the flowers of Spring upon the honored graves of our Confederate dead. Confederate Dead! The very expression, like a bugle blast, causes the Southern people of all classes and conditions to halt amid the active, busy scenes of life for the purpose of living for a few moments amid the sad but splendid experiences of the past. The noble women of the South and the patriots among the men have consecrated this day to the perpetuation of the memories of the grand heroes who nearly a half century ago gave up their lives in defense of the liberties of their people. "The whole earth," said Pericles, as he stood over the remains of his fellow citizens who had fallen in the first year of the Peloponnesian war, "is a sepulchre of illustrious men," and applying the language of Pericles to the South, we can truthfully say that our entire Southland is the sepulchre of brave and illustrious men, who upheld with their life's blood the best traditions

WHERE THE TARIFF HURTS TRADE.

The Chicago Chronicle in an editorial commenting on the recent concessions in the tariff made by this government to placate Germany, says:

"We may look for a general attempt to readjust trade relations between this country and other countries by means of treaties. Our extreme protectionists may be expected at first to resist this movement. But when they come to face the alternative of making concessions in one way or another or becoming involved in tariff wars with most other countries they may find themselves constrained to choose the former."

Germany had threatened us with a tariff war unless we reduced our tariff schedules on certain German manufactures. In other words, Germany gave us to understand that if we shut out her manufactures by a high tariff she would shut out American manufactures by a retaliatory tariff. The powers that be at Washington saw that it would be a losing game for the United States and made a satisfactory arrangement with the German government. It will establish more reciprocal trade relations between the two governments and will enlarge the trade of both.

France, however, is jealous of the concessions made to Germany and is also threatening us like Germany did. We will have to make a similar arrangement with France. The whole thing shows how foolish is the Republican idea that we can shut out foreign manufactures, and then expect foreigners to be our customers. The absurdity of the Republican idea in building up foreign trade is fully demonstrated. "A fair exchange is no robbery," and it would be interesting to know how much larger would be our foreign trade if we had all along engaged in a fair exchange with other countries.

That too much stand-patry is injurious to much of the business of this country, the Washington Post calls attention to a bowl from Maine, a rock-ribbed protection State. Says the Post:

"The disgruntlement that for a long time has prevailed among the Republicans of Massachusetts in relation to the tariff is precolating through the party in other New England States. Even in Maine, whose Senators and Representatives in Congress are regarded as incurable stand-patters, there is grumbling over oppressive schedules. The Bath Anvil, a Republican paper in good standing, hands out some plain talk in an editorial entitled 'The Tariff Injures Maine.' It says: 'Maine without question is suffering a great deal from the high tariff schedules, and her influence in the Republican councils ought to be exerted in favor of revision. Unless the party grants revision this tariff issue is extremely likely to complete the work of purely State questions, and throw Maine into the Democratic column.' Of Maine's six votes in the electoral college and in Congress, the Anvil declares that they are in greater danger now than they have been since the Civil War. Our contemporary submits that 'the tariff on steel is an almost insuperable barrier to the growth of our shipbuilding industry, and the fact that the material from the Pennsylvania mills is delivered on the Clyde at less cost than it is delivered on the Kennebec is sufficient evidence that the need of protection for the mines and mills has long since ceased to exist.' The lumber schedules come in for deserved denunciation. The Anvil says that they 'put a premium on the destruction of the Maine forests with all the economic losses entailed, and by shutting out our ship builders and house builders from the privileges of the inexhaustible Canadian market and placing them in the grip of the Maine lumber barons are a discouraging influence upon the development of the State's great resources, and prevent it from sharing in full measure the prosperity of the nation.' This is the first plea for tariff revision that we have seen in any Maine Republican newspaper, but there are signs of discontent in others."

WILMINGTON'S CONFIDENCE.

Whatever some of our citizens think of it, Wilmington is getting credit for progressiveness in voting favorably on the question of increasing her bonded indebtedness nearly one million dollars at one swoop in last Tuesday's election. Under the heading of "Wilmington's Confidence," the Raleigh Evening Times comments:

"Wilmington has distinguished herself beyond all other cities of North Carolina and beyond most in the entire South. She has just voted bond issues aggregating $900,000 for municipal improvements, and that with an outstanding debt already of more than $700,000. It shows the unbounded confidence of the business men of the community in the solidity of the city's financial condition, and it shows that they are not afraid of bond issues, that they are not willing to forego or delay needed improvements for the sake of a catchy but empty phrase like 'Pay as you go; if you can't pay don't go.' The thing shows the spirit that will make a great city. It is of stuff like that a metropolis is composed."

"There is a lesson for Raleigh in the boldness of Wilmington. If the city by the sea can vote an additional bond issue of $900,000, should the capital city of the State hesitate a moment to sanction the issue of bonds to the comparatively small amount of $100,000 for what is not only an improvement, but an actual necessity if Raleigh is to remain the capital of the State in any other capacity than being merely the site of the capitol building? Of course we refer to the bond issue for the building of a suitable auditorium authorized by the last Legislature, and for which we hope to see the election called as one of the first acts of the board of aldermen that has just been elected."

"We read of bond issues voted by the various towns in the State nearly every day. Just day before yesterday the county seat of Granville, our neighboring little, but loud, town of Oxford, voted by an overwhelming majority a substantial bond issue for city sewerage."

Next comes the Winston-Salem Journal in an editorial headed "Wilmington to the Front." That esteemed contemporary says:

"In a popular election in Wilmington Tuesday two bond issues were passed, the first being for $500,000 for the purchase of the waterworks and sewer system, and the other for $400,000 for permanent street improvements. Wilmington broke the State record in the aggregate sum of bonds to be issued at one time, and we congratulate her upon this great step in her progress. The sum voted for street improvements, judiciously expended, will give her better highways than any city in the State has. North Carolina's City by the Sea is wide-awake and progressive, and her people are doing things."

CHARLOTTE'S CITY TREASURER SHORT.

That was sorrowful news which the Charlotte Observer brought yesterday. The new city administration has discovered that Capt. C. M. Etheridge, city treasurer, is an embezzler to the amount of $941.56. He confessed it when faced and acknowledged that he also took more money from the city in amounts of $1 and $2 at a time. Capt. Etheridge is an old man, and has been city treasurer for six years. His friends made up the shortage, as they also did in the case of a shortage of $190 last year. Last year's shortage was explained, at the time, in a satisfactory manner, and was merely passed over as an oversight but the revelations made in past few days no doubt has greatly shocked the people of Charlotte.

I am regular, do not have these strange feelings, and my headache and pain in my side are better."

ONLY ONE "BEST"

Wilmington People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Wilmington who suffer with sick kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. The best is Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine for the kidneys only, made from pure roots and herbs, and the only one that is backed by cures in Wilmington. Here's Wilmington testimony:

B. R. King, the well known policeman, residing at 706 Wooster street, Wilmington, N. C., says: "I had terrible pain in my back, which worked around to my side and in my stomach, so bad at times that it laid me up. I used internal medicines, and they did not help me. I put on plasters, and rubbed it with liniment, and none of them helped me. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended I got a box of them at Bellamy's drug store. The next day after commencing to use them I noticed relief. Since using two boxes I have not had an ache or pain in my back. It is with pleasure that I add my name to those endorsing the claims made for this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

DISCRIMINATING LADIES.

Enjoy Using Herpelide on Account of Its Distinctiveness.

The ladies who have used Newbro's Herpelide speak of it in the highest terms, for its quick effect in cleansing the scalp of dandruff and also for its excellence as a general hair-dressing. It makes the scalp feel fresh and it allays that itching which dandruff will cause. Newbro's Herpelide effectively cures dandruff, as it destroys the germ that causes it. The same germ causes hair to fall out, and later baldness; in killing it, Herpelide stops falling hair and prevents baldness. It is also an ideal hair dressing, for it lends an aristocratic charm to the hair that is quite distinctive. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpelide Co., Detroit, Mich.

of the Southern States, and were worthy of the perpetual memorial services which the Daughters of the Confederacy have established in their behalf.

Washington Irving tells us that from the grave the flowers of love eternally spring, and if this be true of one grave, using the argument from the less to the greater, how much more should it be true of thousands and ten thousands of graves, containing the mortal remains of our heroic Confederate dead.

To the speaker on this occasion, who himself wore the historic gray, and participated in the trials and dangers of his departed comrades, it is indeed an inspiration to stand beneath the shadows of a Confederate monument and reproduce in heart and mind the associations and memories of the past.

The old soldier upon yonder pedestal is a familiar sight to many of us. To many of you he may seem to be silent, but to some of us he actually speaks, and as he speaks our hearts throb, our brains work, and we easily recall the memories of the days which are past and gone.

As we all stand here today, on consecrated and enchanted ground, we feel the full force of that beautiful sentiment expressed by one of the patriotic sons of old Alabama: "The angels above us hover, and the breezes a requiem sing.

As we meet this day to cover our dead with the flowers of Spring. They were brave, they were true, devoted; they died for their country's laws.

And Montgomery will ever be noted, as the cradle of their cause.

The waves of the Alabama will no longer be seen to roll.

Here the men of that mighty drama shall fade from memory's scroll. The names of Lee and Davis shall gild the wing of time.

Their armies and their navies be praised for deeds sublime.

Since then long years have vanished, their forms have gone to dust.

Their flags have all been banished, their swords have gone to rust.

But their souls are up in glory, and now like angels gleam.

Last night their mystic story came to me in a dream.

To many of us their history is not a mystic story nor a passing dream, but a most powerful reality.

This annual visitation to the graves of our Confederate dead is intended not merely to make us all hold fast to the sacred traditions of the past and commemorate the splendid virtues and heroic deeds of our gallant dead, but also to perpetuate the memory of those noble Southern women who in no small measure shared the sorrows and hardships of our boys who wore the gray.

No pen can describe, no tongue can tell the deep sorrow and travail of soul on the part of our Southern women when they heard from the battlefield that fathers, sons, brothers and devoted husbands had been slain in the day of battle.

Your speaker has heard the walls of anguish from the lips of devoted women when the sad news was broken to them that loved ones had fallen. It was the peerless patriotism and sublime lives of heroic and self-sacrificing service on the part of our Southern women which enhanced the justice and holiness of our Southern cause, and prolonged the terrible struggle for its supremacy.

As a rule our Southern orators on memorial occasions like this have not done justice to the memory of their noble Southern women, who lived and sorrowed here in those perilous times which tried men's souls. But now referring to both the men and women of the South, I will say that one of the most attractive and beautiful traits in Southern life and character is this perpetual tribute to the memory of the great host of Southern heroes who have passed away and gone to join the great company of heroes and heroines who have figured so conspicuously in the history of the world.

The sentinel songs, the camp songs and the marching songs, and the splendid odes of Confederate times will live and live on forever. It is an instinctive principle of the human heart to cherish and perpetuate the memory of that we love, to which we are allied by strong and tender ties.

It is this great principle which constitutes the golden cord which unites the living with the dead, adds dignity, power and glory to man, and distinguishes him from the brute creation, which perish and are forgotten.

What mathematics is to the mind, this great principle is to the heart of a great nation in the preservation of the spirit of patriotism and chivalry, and those high and lofty ideals which have rendered our Southern people so famous in the history of the civilized world.

Those of us who have read at least a portion of ancient history are more or less familiar with the recorded deeds and marvelous exploits of the past.

The ancient Assyrians, the Hebrew, the classic Greek and the proud Roman, both in sculpture, prose and song, tell the ages of the chivalry, valor and glory of their people in those moments of supreme crisis.

When upon the battlefield they confronted powerful foes, and made for themselves a name, and gained the victory, but no people in the history of the everlasting ages shines with a greater lustre than that gilded page which records the deeds of those mighty men of valor who fought for Southern rights, beneath the Stars and Bars.

The so-called conquered banner did not wave over a host of misguided men, called by passion and prejudice traitors and rebels, but a splendid host of as true patriots as ever breathed the pure atmosphere of God.

Those legions which followed the stainless sword of Robert E. Lee which were hurled with tremendous force we may truly say against the whole world, were not traitors fighting from the battlefield that fathers, sons, brothers and devoted husbands had been slain in the day of battle.

STOKLEY AT RICHMOND.

First Prize in Preliminary Shoot Won by Wilmingtonian.
 Mention was made yesterday that Mr. R. J. Stokley, of this city, had won the day's event in the Interstate shoot at Richmond Thursday. The Richmond Times-Dispatch of yesterday says:

"High scores came with the fine weather yesterday at the Interstate Association's Southern Handicap on the Deep Run Hunt Club grounds.
 "A good-sized gallery, including many ladies, followed the shooters from trap to trap, especially where the men were heavily handicapped and forced to shoot from 21 yards. The cracks—Crosby, Heer and Huff—could do little at this long range. High honors went to R. G. Stokley, of Wilmington, N. C., who tied with W. Henderson, of Kentucky, at 92 out of the 100. Stokley made a remarkable run in his last string. He missed his first bird and then ran fourteen straight and nineteen straight in the shoot-off, dropping his last bird. Henderson, who shot off the tie with him, drew hard birds and was easily shot out. This was an exciting shoot-off, and the plucky little Tarheel was accorded quite an ovation.
 "The high professional average went to E. H. Storr, also of North Carolina, who smashed 94 per cent, but as he was a trade representative, the handsome trophy and money purse went to Stokley."

A meeting of the congregation is called for tomorrow morning at the corner of Fourth and Wright streets with the prayer that the Holy Ghost may descend. The public is cordially invited. The following white churches have been asked to receive whatever the white people of the city are willing to give toward re-erecting the building, viz: Grace M. E. Church, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the Lutheran Church, the First Baptist Church, St. James' Episcopal Church, the First Presbyterian Church. An appeal is made to the people of the city to assist the congregation.

Walker, State corresponding secretary of the work, will conduct the 11 o'clock service. He is an excellent speaker and should be heard by a large congregation. In the evening at 7:45 the services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. F. L. Davis. The public in general is invited to attend the services.

PILOT NOT ON BOARD.

Grounding of Schooner Nimbus Down the River Recently.

Capt. Joe Pinner, who was aboard the schooner Nimbus which recently swung ashore down the river while in tow of the tug Blanche, asks the Star to correct a published report that has been going the rounds to the effect that the grounding of the schooner was due to any dereliction of the pilot aboard. As everybody knows or should know by this time, the compulsory pilotage does not affect the river; it applies only to the bar and vessels down the river, especially in the wake of a towboat are not compelled and do not as a matter of fact take a pilot. Capt. Pinner's presence aboard the Nimbus upon the occasion of the recent grounding was due solely to the fact that Capt. Peck, the master, was a personal friend of his and asked him to come aboard the schooner as his guest in preference to going down on the tug. This invitation Capt. Pinner accepted and at the time of the grounding he was seated in the cabin with the captain as his guest, irrespective of his profession as a pilot, not having any more to do with the management of the vessel than did Commander Peary on his way to the North Pole. Capt. Pinner also says that the Nimbus was not grounded so badly as the reports would seem to indicate, for at the first swell of the tide she floated of her own accord and was anchored by the captain in the channel until the tug boat returned to her. The vessel passed on down the river and out to sea, taking Capt. Pinner as a pilot over the bar as is now required by law.

averring that Nelson in the short length of time he was out of the car could not have committed the theft.

While not directly bearing upon the case, the District Attorney asked Col. Hooton if he knew of any other thefts in the past several years in this district and if so to explain the circumstances. He said that some time ago a package of money had been sent to Durham, N. C., and that it was $350 short upon reaching its destination. Another package from Salisbury to the Southern National Bank of this city had been $530 short. Nelson, he said, had been one of the men to handle each package but he, of course, did not undertake to say that the young man was responsible for these shortages. At Rocky Mount a package containing $25 and consigned to a Chinaman in Wilmington had been stolen from the transfer office there. No one save Nelson, the porter and the transfer clerk had access to this room at the time.

Inspector Maxwell corroborated the story of the robbery as told by Col. Hooton. Postmaster Wallace briefly told of his connection with the case and testified to the high character of Nelson before this time. He also paid a deserved tribute to Clerk Frank Powers.

Mr. Powers told of the occurrences on the car the evening the package was stolen. He stated that Nelson told him he had hurt his back and that Mr. Powers told him that he should not have come down to assist the drop letter mail. Nelson said he was a man of his word and said that he would come and therefore, he was present. Mr. Powers said he was gone from the car not exceeding three minutes and did not believe then that Nelson could have stolen the money as he had told the inspectors.

Postal Transfer Clerk Keele, of Rocky Mount, explained the circumstances of the theft of the Chinaman's package at Rocky Mount and said that the porter had not been in the room when the package was missing, therefore, the matter lay between himself and Nelson.

Cashier Joseph W. Yates, of the Atlantic National Bank, told of the dispatch of the stolen package and of the bank's reimbursement by the surety company and later the restoration of the money by Nelson. He testified to the high character of Nelson previous to this time.

It was at the conclusion of this pathetic story that Mr. Bellamy calmly and with beautiful language arose with dignity and with a manifest sympathy for his client and made an eloquent plea for mercy. Many in the court room could not restrain a tear as Mr. Bellamy pictured the home ties of the young man and his singular love and devotion to his aged mother, who had offered as the price of his freedom but for the past few weeks all her earthly possession. He also referred to the young wife so bowed down in sorrow.

Judge Purnell strongly entrenched himself in the hearts of every one in the court room as a merciful man when he went to pass sentence upon the young man, stating that the duty devolving upon him was one of the hardest of his judicial career—one which he would like to escape. He then passed the judgment, which meant so much to the young prisoner at the bar.

The sentence is generally regarded by the public as a light one and one that fully meets the ends of justice in view of the circumstances. By exemplary conduct the young prisoner can have the sentence shortened by four or five months, eight days being allowed each month for exemplary conduct. After the hearing was concluded yesterday, Nelson was led to the jail by a deputy marshal and seemed to bear up under his affliction remarkably well. His attorneys asked that he be allowed the freedom of the jail corridor but Sheriff Cowan had to reluctantly decline. The young man is being made as comfortable as possible and is in the same cell with young Lonnie Sulpes, whose sensational trial a few weeks ago brought out such great public interest.

Marshal Claude Dockery has issued a permit to his mother and wife to visit the son and husband when they choose and to take his meals to him. They called at the jail last night and spent some time with the prisoner. He is bearing up well and seems determined to meet his fate like a man. Marshal Dockery said yesterday afternoon that he could not take the young man to begin serving his sentence until the present court adjourns. There is a remote possibility that all the cases will be completed today in which event Nelson will leave in charge of an officer tomorrow or Monday. Should the term of court run over to Monday, it will probably be the middle of next week before he is taken away.

My Literary Double.

(Original.)

I am a short story writer. After a long illness I was ordered abroad for change and while on my return trip in London bought some American magazines. What was my surprise to find in one of them a story signed by myself. At least the name was mine. Then I remembered that there might be others of my name, and I set about perusing the story to see if the author was a better man with the pen than I.

I am not a versatile writer, and my stories are all in the same vein. Indeed, I consider that one element of my success. When a reader takes a fancy to my work, he can get it again and again, thus becoming more and more attached to it. What was my surprise to see in the story I read my style, my method, my own personality. I wondered as I read on if one of my stories that had come back to me when sent out at the beginning of my career and finally shelved had not fallen into some one's hands who had dishonestly sold it. But I finished it without recognizing a scene in it from beginning to end. It is needless to say that I was puzzled—more than puzzled. I was seized with an uncanny feeling that I had a double somewhere in the world who was interfering with my identity.

On reaching America I went at once to the office of the magazine in which I had seen the story and asked the editor from whence it had come. He told me that it had been received by mail, in typewritten form, with my name attached. The manuscript was produced. There was my signature. It was no forgery. I knew the moment I looked at it that I had written it. I felt a buzzing in my ears and came near fainting.

I was now sure that I was a dual being. My family insisted on my consulting a specialist in nervous diseases, but I knew that I was well and of sound mind. I had never been ill in my life except the once I have mentioned, and then, far from using a typewriter, I couldn't have used a pen. A few days after my visit to the editor, who told me that he had sent me a check for the story, it occurred to me to go to the bank and learn if the money had been drawn. It had not.

Here was a further mystery. If my double were writing stories, using our common brains for the purpose, he at least had a separate bank account. I inquired for this account at every bank in the city, but it was not to be found.

I was destined soon to receive another shock. One evening in calling for a certain magazine my wife made excuses for not producing it, and I knew at once that my double had been publishing another story. I insisted on having the magazine brought forth and found my suspicions to be correct. It contained a story under my name, a story I had never before read.

Upon inquiry I found that it had been received but a few weeks before my return to America, and a check had been sent to my address for it. The check had not been drawn.

I at once notified every magazine in the country that if any stories of mine were in their possession I would be obliged if they would let me know of the fact. Three magazines sent me replies in the affirmative. Each had a story in my especial vein and duly signed with a pen by me, the signature being genuine. Two of them had sent checks. The third had not.

Since upon inquiry at the postoffice I had learned that there were no letters there for me, I concluded that my double had received those containing the checks. But why had he not drawn the money? If he could use my brain and sign my name to his creations he could certainly indorse a check. I notified the postmaster to hold any mail for me at the office bearing the official stamp of the magazine that had not sent me its check and to have any one calling for a letter for me arrested. Then I asked the editor of the magazine in question to mail me its check.

The letter was received at the postoffice and held instead of being sent to me by a postman. It was not called for. A month passed, and one morning I received an envelope inclosing all the checks that had been sent out for these mysterious stories. But no note, no word of explanation, came with it.

I was greatly relieved. My double was an individual and an honest one. He or I, one or both of us, scorned to take money that had not been fairly earned. But had he or I earned it? He being honest, should I be dishonest and draw the money for the checks?

One day I secured a note written in a woman's hand. The writer offered to explain the mystery of my double if I would guarantee not to prosecute her for any illegal act. I sent a reply immediately agreeing to her terms, and the next morning the woman called on me. I at once recognized the nurse who had attended me during my illness.

She confessed that when under her care I had insisted on dictating to her and that she had conceived the idea of selling the stories I dictated. She had them typewritten and gave them to me to sign. After my departure she sent them out, but had no way of drawing the checks except by forgery, from which she shrank.

No doctor has satisfactorily explained my condition of mind during this unconscious literary work. It seems probable to me that I was in a mental condition to dictate the stories at some time during my illness, but that subsequently I passed through a period which obliterated the remembrance of having done so.

S. HUNTER HALSEY.

The Agent of the Tagblatt Property

(Original.)

Old Steiger, who had charge of the Tagblatt house and grounds, was probably the worst landlord that has ever been seen on the face of the globe. When Tagblatt died, Steiger was appointed custodian of his property by the court, and Steiger was then a young man. The court of the will had executed a deed of gift of the property at the time of Tagblatt's death, but that had been so long ago that no one living seemed to know anything about it. Many persons had rented the property, but no one could be found who could get on with the landlord or agent, or whatever he was, and not a tenant had remained a year.

The place was situated near the foot of the Hars mountains, on the outskirts of a village. The village had grown to be a city, and, having enveloped the property, old Tagblatt's bequest had grown very valuable—that is, the land had, for the house was almost uninhabitable from age.

If Steiger was the worst landlord in the world, Chris and Gretchen Rheinheart were the best tenants. The rental of the Tagblatt property had never been high, and when Chris and Gretchen were married they decided to take it. This they did with open eyes, for they knew all about old Steiger and his ways. Hans was a carpenter and could make repairs himself. So the young couple decided to take the place at the low rental and not trouble the landlord to do anything for them. By this means they hoped to be let alone and not have any trouble.

Chris spent a good deal of time when he first went into the house endeavoring to make it habitable. Steiger came along while he was at work and with the usual abuse and oaths threatened if he made any changes in the house he would prosecute him under the law. Chris desisted for the time being, but when Steiger went away he proceeded with his repairs.

However, it was plain that there would be no peace in the house, and the couple talked over the matter of leaving it. They finally decided to stay, Chris for the reason that he was too determined to be driven out and Gretchen because she was of such a sweet disposition that she was fitted to get on with Satan himself. But Steiger seemed determined to drive them out. They made it difficult for him by denying him pretexts. The rent they invariably paid before it was due. They never asked for anything to be done to the property. Indeed, whatever patching they did was for its improvement, as any court would have decided. Notwithstanding all this Chris at last gave out and told Gretchen that he must either give up their lease or go into a lunatic asylum.

Gretchen's lovely disposition seemed not a whit shaken, and they decided that thereafter Chris should keep out of Steiger's way and she would receive the abuse.

Then came a tussle between good and evil. When Steiger was seen coming down the street Chris would escape by a back door, and when the old man stopped to abuse his tenants Gretchen would meekly submit to the lashings of his tongue. Gretchen took it into her lovely stupid head that if Steiger had a little pity he would not be so unreasonable, so one day when the door opened and he stood glaring at her she took a crucifix off the mantle, intending to tell him the story of the Saviour. What was her surprise to see him the moment he saw it turn away and hurry on down the street, sending back volleys of execrations, just as retreating soldiers will turn and fire at an enemy.

But Gretchen had found an expedient. After that Steiger let them alone for a long while. Indeed, he did not call again till just before the expiration of the lease, when he made a fierce onslaught, accusing Gretchen of having been trying to burn the house. She cowered before him for a moment, for he looked more terrible than ever she had seen him; then, taking up the crucifix, she was beginning to tell him of the example and sacrifice of the figure on the cross when with a howl he made off again, just as he had done before.

Having found a way to protect themselves, they decided to renew their lease, but Steiger did not appear, and the tenants submitted the matter to the court of wills.

One day the judge sent for the tenants, and they went to him together. "You have accepted the Tagblatt property for a year?" he asked.

"One year. Here is the lease. It expired a month ago. To whom shall we pay rent?"

"Steiger has disappeared. After discovering this I looked up the will, which is on record. It seems that Tagblatt had a shrew for a wife, and they were always quarreling. Mrs. Tagblatt died first, and when her husband followed her he left their home to the devil."

"To the devil!" exclaimed Chris and Gretchen, the women crossing herself.

"Yes, to the devil, with the provision that if any couple could be found to live in it one year they were to be its owners."

"Gott in himmel!" exclaimed Gretchen.

"Where this agent named Steiger came from and where he got his authority no one seems to know. He got hold of the property before I came on the bench. But that is now of no importance. I will have the property made over to you jointly."

"Jesu Maria! We have been paying rent to the devil!"

THE BEAT OF THE PULSE.

It Varies Greatly In Different Persons and Conditions.

The pulse of women generally beats at a slightly faster rate than that of men. It may be said that when a person is at rest his pulse, that of any adult, may be from seventy-five to eighty times a minute. Great variation exists in different individuals in respect of the number of beats. After exercise the pulse quickens because of the stimulation of the heart, and the same result applies to the effects of taking food. A dose of alcohol will also stimulate the pulse somewhat, just as the use of tobacco, especially in excess, will tend to have an opposite effect—namely, that of lowering the rate of the pulse, because of the depression of the heart which results. In fevers and inflammatory diseases the pulse rate tends to be very much increased and also in respect of its character. Instead of beating quietly the blood vessel in such cases exhibits a very full and bounding movement. On the other hand, where depression exists and the temperature of the body falls, the pulse may be unnaturally slow and its character weak. Physicians are accustomed to distinguish other characteristics in the pulse, such as become valuable hints in the discovery and determination of disease. The practical lesson we learn here is that where the pulse continues for any length of time to have its beats quickened to an unnatural degree and where especially a rise of the temperature or heat of the body accompanies these symptoms we ought to suspect some kind of feverish condition or other to be represented. The pulse alone forms a valuable enough guide to this state of the body, but its value is very much increased if by the information given us by the pulse we add that which the use of the thermometer supplies.—Cardiff Times.

NAMES OF DAYS.

The Latin and Saxon Terms From Which They Are Derived.

Our names for each day are derived from the Saxons, who probably borrowed the week from some eastern people, substituting names of their own divinities for those of the classical gods, as is easily seen when the names are tabulated:

Latin.	Saxon.	English.
Dies Solis.....	Sun's day.....	Sunday.
Dies Lunae.....	Moon's day.....	Monday.
Dies Martis.....	Tiw's day.....	Tuesday.
Dies Mercurii.....	Woden's day.....	Wednesday.
Dies Jovis.....	Thor's day.....	Thursday.
Dies Veneris.....	Frige's day.....	Friday.
Dies Saturni.....	Seterne's day.....	Saturday.

Among the ancients the belief in the influence of the planets upon the life of men was so strong that many in selecting their daily ornaments would wear only the gem associated with the planet of the day. Thus on Sunday only yellow gems and gold should adorn the fingers. Pearls and white stones, excepting diamonds, belonged to the Moon day. Tuesday, day of Mars, claimed rubies and all stones of fiery luster. Thursday, Thor's day, demanded amethysts and deep colored stones of sanguine tint, while Friday, dominated by Venus, reigned over the emerald, color of jealousy, which is love's shadow. Saturday, dedicated to Saturn, chief of the gods, had for its distinctive talisman the black stone of all evils, the obsidian.

ing for the extension of human slavery, but free men and patriots like Washington, Marion, and others fighting for freedom and the indisputable constitutional rights of this most glorious Southland of ours.

I wish on this memorial occasion to emphasize the truth that the powerful batteries of Dixie were not manned by rebels, and those who wore the gray were not led by traitors but by brave and gallant Americans who sincerely believed they were vindicating the right against the wrong.

I am so glad to know that since the clouds of war have rolled away that broad-minded men all over the civilized world recognize this to be a fact. That grand, old battle-scarred veteran, General N. M. Curtis, who led the furious assault and was dangerously wounded at Fort Fisher, in referring to the bravery of the Confederate soldiers, said in substance: "We can all now claim it as a heritage of American valor." I have thought of it a thousand times since. Such a thing as a Fort Fisher Survivors' Association, composed of the blue and the gray, could not have been possible if those brave men on the other side had even for a moment looked upon us as dupes of Judas Iscariot, or Benedict Arnold.

The true record of the South, when related with historical accuracy, is rich in patriotism, in intellectual force, in civic and military achievements, in honorable statesmanship of which no true and patriotic American can afford to deprive himself. The South, especially in her days of deep sorrow and extreme poverty, has been vigorously assailed and reproached for disunion and secession, but now, as the clouds and mists of war have rolled away, the exact position of the South in 1861 is better understood by all the civilized and truly enlightened nations, and the whole world knows that the South fought for the defense of an idea, a pronounced opinion, not in defense of slavery, but that the old constitution of our patriotic forefathers which was not defiled by the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, whose real philosophy at the time did not mean so much the universal brotherhood of man as a degradation of a portion of that proud Anglo-Saxon race which the great God of the universe has chosen to civilize and evangelize the whole world.

If you will pardon a personal allusion, your speaker wore the gray and shouldered a musket, and I dare any man on earth to say that I shouldered a musket to keep a negro in chains, and what is true of the speaker is also true of every soldier in that grand Confederate army, which was one of the grandest armies which has ever appeared on earth. Dr. Currie (deceased), the great statesman, diplomat and preacher, said: "It must not be forgotten that there is a wide difference between secession and rebellion. The South made no war upon the States remaining in the Union. Secession meant disunion so far as the seceding States were concerned, but it meant neither war nor rebellion. The whole history of secession shows that the South in seceding had no intentions whatever of assailing their former Confederates. Each step taken in secession in view of the deep feeling and great excitement of the times was marvelously conservative, marked with statesman-like conduct, and a decent regard for the United States. Its Peace Commissions, its diplomacy, its want of preparation for war, all make clear to those who wish to know, that the South sought a peaceful withdrawal from the Union, leaving the remaining States unembarrassed and undisturbed."

The beautiful Sunny South is therefore, not responsible for the terrible baptism of blood through which the nation passed over 43 years ago and the loss of billions of dollars worth of property, and the loss of so many brave Americans who fell on both sides during the struggle. Just here you may ask the question, Why is it at this late day you are digging up this old history? Well, I will tell you. It is our duty on these memorial occasions to teach our children to know that the Confederate States and the great war between the States, was not rebellion. It was simply the result of an effort on the part of the other States to coerce the Southern States against their will into the Union with them, a power not to be found in the Constitution, a power which all the early fathers said did not exist, a power utterly inconsistent with the right of secession, which it is believed all parts of the United States recognized, from Maine to Texas, when the Constitution was formed, and many years afterwards.

The New York Tribune, the organ of the abolitionists of that day and time, said if the Cotton States wish to withdraw, they should be allowed to do so, and that any attempt to force them to remain would be contrary to the principles of the Declaration of Independence, and to the fundamental idea upon which human liberty is based, and that if the Declaration of Independence justified the secession from the British Empire of three millions in 1776, it could not see why it would not justify the South in withdrawing from the Union in 1861.

I sincerely hope that I am not going to be misunderstood in my reference in this memorial address to secession, that I am not trying to get up another rebel yell, for if I should succeed it would frighten some of these old folks around, and about as much as a first-class earthquake shock. I am simply exercising the God-given right of defending our own, and ever-expanding Southland from the mean and hateful charges of disunion and rebellion. I am defending the rank and file of the powerful army represented by that old soldier standing up yonder, from the charge of disloyalty and rebellion.

The good book says "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor," and just as long as I can speak or use a pen, I, for one, am going to deny this false testimony. I son on this memorial day endeavoring to demonstrate the fact that behind the grand efforts of our noble Southern women in perpetuating the heroism and patriotism of the past, there is something more than mere sentiment. Daughters of the Confederacy, behind your efforts in honoring the dead by placing flowers upon their graves and bestowing crosses of honor upon these old battle-scarred veterans who will soon cross the river to rest beneath the shade of the trees, there is eternal and indestructible principle. I never think of the sacred relations existing between our Southern women and their dead and living heroes, without feeling the force of that exclamation "God bless our noble Southern women." The immortal, the ever-beautiful.

I have no patience whatever, with those who say that the time is past for all these Confederate demonstrations, these building and unveiling of monuments which is being done in our native county today. I am in two places today. I am in this beautiful city of the dead, standing under the shadows of this Confederate monument, and also in the Court House Square at Lumberton, listening at Bob Glenn and Col. William Lamb tell my old neighbors and friends of the glories of the past, and I believe that one hundred years from now, the same customs of today will prevail, for Southern sentiment was never born to die. It will live until the sun shall slumber in the clouds, forgetful of the voice of the morning. Any man, woman or child, North, South, East, or West, from the Golden Gate of the Pacific to the gentle slopes of the Atlantic who has one grain of sanctified common sense, knows that the question of secession has been settled and settled forever, and all the patriots of the North and South rejoice today that there is a genuine reunion of the Blue and the Gray, and the proudest and happiest day of my life was a few months ago, when the man who tried to kill me, and afterwards captured me, said on the old battlefield grounds, "I want you and I in the presence of your children and these comrades to clasp the hand of eternal friendship and brotherly love," and this picture which I now hold up before your eyes shows you that the great God of battles settled the difficulties between the sections in his own mysterious way, and I can see him making out of the South one of the grandest and most prosperous people on the face of the whole earth. It is an inspiration to know that he is the God of nature, as well as the God of grace, and he is going to keep on top that grand Anglo-Saxon race which he has chosen to civilize and evangelize the whole world.

I have trodden a great deal over our Southland, and I am convinced of the fact that we are the most prosperous and contented people on the face of the whole earth, and our power and influence is going to be felt on a gigantic scale from Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand, but friends our visions of coming glory and our grand possibilities in the future, must never allow us to forget our Confederate past. We are yet the Solid South, and we are going to remain so for all time. Men may come and men may go, but we will remain the Southern people, the same yesterday, today, and forever. It makes no difference who is President or Governor, or what party has a maority in Congress, we of the South are going to hold fast to the form of sound words, and the sacred traditions of the past. We are going to keep on singing "Maryland, My Maryland," and "The Bonnie Blue Flag," and our bands are still going to play "Dixie," and the other fellows may play for what we care, "Yankee Doodle," till Gabriel blows the last trumpet.

The Lord has been with us in all our trials and afflictions and he is going to be with us to the end. Before I close this address I wish to emphasize the thought that no Confederate soldier went into the Army to defend the institution of slavery, and I don't believe the true soldier in Blue went into the Army to defend the negro and give him forty acres and a mule. It was simply a difference of opinion as to States' rights and the character of the Constitution.

We of the South went in simply for self-defense and the preservation of our liberty. When Abraham Lincoln called for 75,000 volunteers, and requested us to fight our friends and neighbors he set the woods on fire, and the combined powers of earth and hell could not have prevented us from putting on that grey uniform and fighting until we were overpowered, but not licked. This is the whole story in a nutshell, and everybody from the snow-capped mountains of Vermont to the Everglades of Florida, knows that this is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, therefore, the real philosophy of all these Confederate reunions, the organization of all these Camps of veterans and the organizations of these Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy is not to revive old issues or open old scores, but it is to honor our sacred dead and console our living.

We, as a chivalrous and patriotic people, are fixed in our determination that mankind may not forget nor falsehood deny the purity and sincerity of our Southern soldiers. It is our duty as long as life shall last to teach the present generation to honor the Confederate soldiers, whether dead or alive, and I have but little regard for the man or woman or child, North, South, East or West, who does not honor the Confederate soldier. It always makes me feel like being a stronger, better and wiser man when I see him standing guard in marble form on such monuments as are now visible all over the South. The Confederate soldier from 1861 to 1865 are grand object lessons to the young people of the South, and their splendid record and magnificent achievements demonstrate the fact that there is such a thing as loyalty to principles, true patriotism and love of country demonstrated on hundreds of battlefields.

Who can see a Stonewall Jackson on the bloody plains of Manassas without an inspiration? Who can see Robert E. Lee mounted in majestic form on his faithful "Old Traveller" without desiring to become great and good?

His address to the Army of Northern Virginia as he was about to sheathe his stainless sword at Appomattox is a golden gem in the literature of earth and ought to be translated in the language of every nation, kindred tribe and tongue on earth. I have read a great deal about the wars of both ancient and modern times, but I fail to find one Robert E. Lee and one Stonewall Jackson. Dr.

Hunter McGuire in an address delivered at Richmond in 1897, made this significant statement: "It is with swelling heart and deep thanksgiving that I heard some of the first soldiers and military students of England declare that within the past two hundred years the English speaking race had produced but five soldiers of the first or highest rank: Marlboro, Washington, Wellington, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. I heard them declare that Jackson's campaign in the Shenandoah Valley was the very finest specimen of strategy the world has ever seen or will ever see." The truth in substance is this, it was a splendid roll of gallant and distinguished men who composed the Confederate States Army, and fought side by side with some of the truest and bravest men who have ever lived, and I am glad that God has given me so many occasions like this to vindicate the right against the wrong.

When I die, if my friends think enough of me to place a humble slab at the head of my grave, I hope the words Confederate Soldier will be chiseled on that slab. I am so glad that our people and especially our noble women, are so carefully guarding and zealously preserving the sacred traditions of the past. Men may write about "The Lost Cause," and in pathetic poetry fold the conquered banner, but there is in reality no such thing as a lost cause or conquered banner. The South is coming and coming and coming fast, and her past trials and afflictions are not worthy to be compared with her future glory yet to be revealed. Her magnificent resources, her honesty and solidarity in business and commercial relations, her magnificent churches, her splendid schools and colleges, her orthodox, her purity of faith, her Christian morals, and great evangelical spirit is going to win for her the favor and power of God, and if God be for us who can be against us? Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and he scourgeth every son that he receiveth. He has chastened us as a people, but He has done it to make us great and good, and prepare us for a splendid benediction before the curtain falls and this earthly drama ends. I met a few days ago a distinguished minister of the Gospel, and he was a small boy living with his parents in the city of London during the War Between the States. He said to me, "I see you are going to deliver the address May 10th, and you can close with the statement that the Olive Branch of Peace now waves over the land of the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

THE COTTON MARKET.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, May 10.—The cotton market was less active and continued irregular with prices rallying in the afternoon and closed steady at a net advance of 1 point to a decline of 5 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 point in response to cables and the favorable early forecast calling for clearing weather in the belt.

July shot up to last night's prices right after the call on covering, but the general list worked lower on the prospects for better weather, liquidation and bear pressure, and prices during the middle of the morning were about 3 to 8 points net lower, with the chief loss on the new crop months.

Later the market was steadied by covering, the continued bullish crop reports from the South, bull support in the summer months and private reports claiming bad weather in the central and western belts.

July advanced to 10.73, or three points net higher, and the new crop rallied to a point or two over last night's final, but eased off slightly toward the close under realizing.

Southern spot markets reported early were unchanged 1-4c higher and a bullish visible than was looked to tomorrow, following a moderate uptight movement for the week.

Receipts of cotton at the ports today, 10,323 bales, against 9,801 last week and 10,852 last year. For the week, 65,000 bales, against 72,826 last week and 68,347 last year.

Today's receipts at New Orleans, 656 bales, against 1,160 last year and at Houston 2,884 bales against 1,511 last year.

QUICK DIVING BY SUBMARINE

Extraordinary Tests With New Boat Octopus in Nasty Sea and Fog.

BROKE ALL DIVING RECORDS

Submerged and Went to Bottom in Four Minutes—When Coming to Surface She Dived and Successfully Avoided Collision.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.) Newport, R. I., May 10.—All American records for quick diving by a submarine boat were broken today, when the submarine Octopus went through a series of extraordinary tests in Coddington Cove, in a nasty sea, with a thick fog that cleared at times, and a southwest wind that blew forty miles an hour. The principal test was to determine whether the Octopus, while afloat, would be able to get submerged quickly if an enemy should be sighted. Running at full speed on the surface, propelled by gasoline engines, the Octopus received a signal from the trial board on the tender Nina. Immediately the engines were stopped and power was furnished by storage batteries, diving rudders were adjusted, the submarine took 3 tons of water into her tanks and sank to a depth of 20 feet. This was accomplished within four and a half minutes after receiving the signal. A second test reduced the time by about half a minute.

When coming to the surface from one of her dives, the Octopus sighted in the lifting fog a tug and tow of barges, the submarine immediately dived and escaped the danger of a collision by going down so deep in the water that the tow could pass above in safety. At another time, when the Octopus was running awash at a speed of 10 knots an hour she dived and was completely submerged in 23 seconds.

BAD WEATHER PUT UP PRICES.

During Week Cotton Futures Advanced 35 to 60 Points.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.) New York, May 10.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Weather conditions, as for five weeks past, are still the key to the regular crop and trade reports which come from a wide area of the country. Freezing weather and snow have hurt trade and retarded crop preparations and growth in the North west, while low temperatures and heavy rains affected Southern distribution and crop growth and measurably influenced distribution in the Central West and East.

Other developments of the week have been encouraging. The iron and steel industries are actively engaged, and other industries, particularly building, are being actively pushed. Labor disturbances, taken as a whole, are not serious, excepting at San Francisco, where business has been brought to a complete standstill by strikes and at New York where an early general strike of dock laborers has caused much interruption to the movement of freight.

Higher prices for cereals, cotton and other natural products are a result of bad crop reports and broadening speculative interest. European crop reports are little better than our own, and partly explain higher quotations offered for wheat and corn.

Cotton advanced thirty-five points for spots, sixty points for May and fifty points for July on continued unfavorable crop advices and reported improvement in demand for cotton goods for Fall delivery. Some of the advance in futures was shaded later on realizing.

Southern crop reports this week laid stress on the excessive rains reported in the Gulf and lower Mississippi Valley sections.

Hog products are higher this week, pork advancing 75 cents and lard 5 points, while cottonseed oil went up 7 cents.

HEARST WINS OVER McCLELLAN.

Has Right to Contest His Election as Mayor of New York.

Albany, N. Y., May 10.—The Court of Appeals today sustained the right of Attorney General Jackson to attack in the name of the people the title of George B. McClellan as Mayor of New York City, in behalf of William R. Hearst. The Hearst cause has now won in all courts. The court is unanimous and no opinion is given.

Mr. Jackson's predecessor denied Hearst's application for permission to begin quo warranto proceedings against McClellan. Mr. Jackson tried to re-open the case, but was stopped by an injunction, whereupon he brought action upon his own initiative in the name of the people. His right to reverse his predecessor was attacked and it was also urged that he had begun the action in defiance of a writ of prohibition.

It is assumed here that the test of McClellan's title will now proceed on its merits.

PRINCE BORN AMID REJOICING

Young Queen of Spain is Mother of Vigorous Male Child.

TWENTY-ONE GUNS BOOMED

Populace Was Greatly Excited Over Birth of Successor to the Throne—Infant Presented to King on Silver Walter.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.) Madrid, May 10.—The news that the direct male succession to the throne of Spain had been assured by the birth today of a son to Queen Victoria, sent a thrill of rejoicing throughout the country and tonight the happy event is being celebrated from one end of the land to another. Queen Victoria and the child are doing well. The hurried departure of royal messengers from the palace at 8 o'clock this morning to summons the courtiers and the members of the diplomatic corps gave the first indication that the birth was imminent. The usual gathering outside the courtyard was soon swept with immense throngs of the excited populace, who watched the continual stream of brilliantly dressed personages driving up to the royal residence and tried to identify the individuals.

The crowd awaited in suspense until near 1 o'clock when the thunder of the first cannon shot signified that the royal accouchment was over. The reports were counted anxiously. The seconds passed as hours until the sixteenth shot boomed forth and continued until 21 has been fired, informing the people that the royal child was a son.

The report brought forth a ringing cheer and at the same time, the royal standard was hoisted over the palace and it was known that no mistake had been made.

The people danced with joy and embraced each other, shouting, "Long live the King! Long live the Queen!" Washington, May 10.—President Roosevelt today sent King Alfonso XIII. the following message: "I congratulate Your Majesty and the Spanish nation on the birth of an heir to the throne of Spain."

Guatemala Has Made Satisfactory Agreement With Mexico.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.) Washington, May 10.—The Mexican Ambassador, Mr. Creel, tonight authorized the Associated Press to say that the trouble between Mexico and Guatemala, which for several days has threatened to terminate the diplomatic relations between the two countries, has been definitely and satisfactorily adjusted. Mr. Creel tonight received advices from his home government to this effect. As to the basis of the agreement, the Ambassador declined to talk. "You may state, however," he said, "that the trouble is now over and that a satisfactory agreement has been reached."

GREAT INJUSTICE IF NOT TRUE

Chicago Journal Publishes Sensational Story About Charles H. Moyer.

SERVED IN PENITENTIARY

Story is That President of Western Federation of Miners Was Convicted of Burglary—Report is Denied.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.) Chicago, May 10.—The Journal today prints a long story in which it is alleged that Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, now on trial at Boise, Idaho, served as a convict in the penitentiary at Joliet, in this State, in 1886 and 1887. The date of his discharge is said to have been January 4, 1887.

According to the Journal, Moyer was sentenced from Cook county on February 4, 1886, to serve one year for burglary. The date of his discharge is given as January 4, 1887.

The Journal also prints a story under the date line of Boone, Ia., which is substantially as follows:

"Frank S. Moyer, chief of police of Boone, for four years and now a conductor on a street car line here, is a brother of Charles H. Moyer. He said today to a Journal correspondent: 'I heard that Charles got into trouble in Chicago once and was arrested, probably the less said about it the better. I know that Charles went to Chicago in 1884 or 1885 and was gone about a year and a half. I did not hear from him during that time. Later Charles went to Deadwood and then to Denver. I have often heard Charles speak of Sam Williams, but I never saw Williams myself.'"

It appears that the Pinkerton detective agency, soon after the arrest of Moyer, became aware that a man named Charles H. Moyer had been in the penitentiary at Joliet. Operatives were at once set to work to collect evidence as to the identity of the convict, Charles H. Moyer, for the purpose of introducing it at the trial of the president of the Western Federation of Miners in a certain contingency. The evidence on the subject cannot be introduced except an attempt is made to show good character. If this be done at the trial of Moyer, witnesses will be on hand to show that the president of the Western Federation of Miners is the Charles H. Moyer who served a term in Joliet penitentiary for burglary. If Moyer was at work in the Black Hills in 1886 and can produce proof to show this fact, the jury will have before them for decision the question of the preponderance of evidence.
